Legislative Decisions

Decision on this item is a legislative action. When the Planning Commission is acting on a legislative item it is acting as a recommending body to the County Commission and has wide discretion. Examples of legislative actions are general plan, zoning map, and land use code amendments. Typically, the criterion for providing a recommendation on a legislative matter suggests a review for compatibility with the general plan and existing ordinances.

Background

The current land use code (LUC), under the definitions of accessory building, main building, accessory use, and main use, does not appear to allow an "accessory building" to be placed on a lot that does not have a "main building." In essence, what this means is that any main use of property that is an open air use of property (i.e., agriculture, agritourism, golf course, public and private park, reservoir, mining operations, parking lot, etc.) may not have an accessory building to support the use unless and until a main building has been established. To complicate this, most zones list "accessory building or use customarily incidental to any permitted or conditional use" as a permitted use in the zone, leading one to think that an accessory building can be established without a main building, despite the directive in the definitions section.

This conflict has caused confusion for administration of the code.

Policy Analysis

The Planning Commission should evaluate which of the two conflicting provisions should prevail. Should accessory buildings incidental to a permitted or conditional use be allowed without a main building on the property? Or should a main building be required prior to the establishment of an accessory building?

As an interpretive guide, the Planning Commission should know that the difference between a main building and an accessory building is not necessarily based on the specific use of the building as provided in the listed permitted or conditional uses of the zones; it is based on whether the use of the building can be identified as incidental and accessory to the use of another building. If it cannot be, then it is a main building; the use of which must comply with the allowed permitted and conditional uses listed in the zone chapters.

If a building is defined as a main building it has to meet stricter setback requirements than a building defined as an accessory building. These requirements depend on the zone. This is an important distinction, because open-air uses of land typically rely on greater amounts of unobstructed land area. A main building may also be subject to more specific architectural and site design requirements if it is used to accommodate commercial uses, industrial uses, manufacturing uses, public uses, quasi-public uses, or recreation resort uses.<sup>1</sup>

This topic is primarily focused on uses of property that are open-air uses of land that have not otherwise had buildings established on them. One of the primary open-air uses of land in Weber County is agriculture. It will be in the best interest of those agricultural users and agriculture-adjacent land owners for the ordinances to be clarified in a manner that clearly sets forth the expectations.

With the proposal found in Exhibit B, staff is providing a way to allow a "main building designed or used to accommodate the main use to which the premises are devoted," which for certain types of open-air land uses may in fact look and act like an accessory building, but for the purposes of establishing required setbacks and applicable design standards, is regulated like a main building. Thus, with this addition it is possible for open-air land uses to have a "main building" as an "accessory use" of land. After a "main building" is established, the owner may establish an "accessory building" – at the reduced accessory building setback – as long as the accessory building is incidental and accessory to the use of the main building.

As the Planning Commission hears and considers each proposed change there are several things to be looking for:

- 1. Does the proposed change comply with the purpose and/or intent of the specific code section or relevant zone? Every change should comply with that purpose/intent.
- 2. Does the proposed change comply with the goals and objectives of the General Plan? The General Plan should act as a guide to vet land use ordinance decisions.
- 3. Does the proposed change promote the health, safety, and welfare of the community?
- 4. Does the proposed change provide equitable balance between land use rights and the public good?

Conformance to the General Plan

The attached proposal generally follows how the current administration is applying the land use code. It simply clarifies the approach. Support for it can be loosely found in both general plans. Providing a code that enables support buildings for open-air land uses promotes those potential land uses.

In Western Weber County the primary open-air land use is agriculture. The West Central Weber County General Plan indicates the desire to protect and promote agricultural uses/lands through agricultural protection and preservation efforts.<sup>2</sup> The plan's Future Land Use Map (aka "proposed land use map") also depicts large quantities of land intended to support agricultural uses.<sup>3</sup>

In the Ogden Valley the primary open air land use may be threefold: agriculture, general open space, and recreation; each having their own unique needs for support buildings, as may be allowed by code. The Ogden Valley General Plan supports the use of land for agriculture,<sup>4</sup> and also sets forth policies and implementation strategies intended to "protect open land and encourage the creation of new recreation facilities..."<sup>5</sup>
